

Riding levels Enduro

Level 1:

Gravel lanes and open trails alternating with single trails without steep ascents or descents, and with the occasional detour on longer stretches of tarmac to avoid off-road sections that are too extreme. Suitable for novices.

Level 2:

Gravel lanes with washouts and potholes, eroded open trails, occasional deep ruts, firebreaks, dry river courses, simple river crossings, single trails without steep ascents or descents. Suitable for novices.

Level 3:

Rutted gravel lanes, eroded open trails with water holes, single trails with tight turns as well as extreme ascents and descents, demanding river and stream crossings. With longer, easier passages in between. Riding experience in the area recommended.

Level 4:

Slopes, scree, deep sand, ruts, slippery ground: There is difficult terrain like this, as well as steep ascents and descents to master. Also on the itinerary: Mud holes, steep slopes, slope traversing and fast riding. Regular riding experience in the area required.

Level 5:

Extremely challenging sections of terrain are ridden in all weather conditions, whether in wet weather or extreme heat. A generally high level of riding technique without any longer, simpler passages means high demands are placed on physical fitness. The group will only get through this with team spirit. Regular riding experience in the area required.
